II. PRELIMINARY REMARKS

The “LAICAL WRITINGS OF THE THIRD MILLENNIUM” and their necessary functional progression

The writings mostly distributed in the past generally were of religious type.

The written works of religious type aimed to guide the behaviour of human beings.

In the meantime the most important religious configurations and their derivations have permanently contributed to shape the cultural, regulatory and organizational bases of the way of life.

Their several differentiated variations led to a condition of division and isolation, with trends provoking consequences at all times and levels.

At present the evolution level already attained by humankind compels to produce writings being able to propose and deal with a new and distinct field of evolutionary applications, in a “laical” way.

And these applications must find an answer starting from the right reasons and from the logical discernment arisen from the still ruling primigenial instinctive and temperamental reactions.

The “laical writings of the third millennium” carry out an essential updating function, with respect to the “religious stuff”, by establishing a direct relationship with the multiple new problems concerning evolution.

Of course this project, dedicated to the future of humankind, is not feasible if complying with the arbitrary configuration always applied generally to the way of life.

The relationship linking the decisive negative factors is so deep and strict that it always proposes this type of functional conditions again, regularly and constantly.

That significantly emphasizes the essential evolutionary process, together with its consolidated components.

The irremovable situation that has arisen compels to a radical cultural transformation of both the standards of behaviour, coexistence and relationship and those having to produce an innovative and transcendent organization, as well as a set of regulations for the conformation of the whole human context.

The “laical writings of the third millennium” offer a conceptual contribution besides aiming to codify the conditioning and consequences deriving from the evolutionary process of human beings.

The editorial plan of these writings includes:

- * an introductory volume

- * three main parts with interconnected subjects:

  - a “first part” consisting of 20 chapters that described the bases of the explained position

  - a “second part” consisting of 14 chapters

  - a “third part” consisting of 15 chapters.

These parts have been conceived according to issues in strict thematic correlation.
